Text: Democracy as a Political System

Democracy is a system of government in which people choose their leaders by voting in free and fair elections. In a democracy, citizens have rights such as freedom of speech and equality before the law. They can express their opinions and take part in public life. One important strength of democracy is that it allows people to participate in decision-making. It also promotes accountability, as leaders can be voted out if they do not perform well. In addition, democracy helps to protect human rights and encourages fairness.

However, democracy also has weaknesses. Decision-making can be slow because many people are involved. Some voters may not have enough information, and elections can sometimes be unfair. Democracy needs responsible citizens and honest leaders to work well.
